Trainer's Forum

If, like many agility addicts, you have multiple dogs, you may have one that barks when you're working one of the others. This month's group of trainers have suggestions to help you train your dogs to wait quietly for their turns. By Brenna Fender

Timing of Front Crosses, Part 2: Early Front Crosses

Cueing your front crosses earlier than advocated in the Derrett handling system to get your dog to turn tighter may have short-term benefits, but it can also have long-term fallout. By Greg Derrett

Tricks for Agility: Shake Hands and Wave

These tricks may be "oldies," but they strengthen and stretch your dog's front legs and shoulders as well as encourage the dog to accept handling of his feet and increase front-foot awareness. By Sassie Joiris

47 When Pigs Fly: Teaching the Front Cross, Part 2

Last month's article explained how to teach your dog to recognize your cue for a front cross. Now you'll learn why you need to train lateral distance for the front cross and how to teach it. By Jane Killion

61 Vision in Dogs, Part 1: What Do They See and How Do We Know?

Our performance dogs are regularly presented with unique situations and must navigate obstacles at high speed; there is no substitute for good vision in the execution of these tasks. Yet, dogs have many of the same eye problems that humans have—and a few more. Learn about what your dog sees. By Cynthia Cook, DVM, PhD, Dip. ACVO

67 Can You Handle It?

Test your skills on a challenging section of the 2008 FCI Agility World Championship Large Dog Individual Agility course that's been designed to fit in a 60' x 80' area. By Ann Croft

72 Shelter Champs

While many competitors dream of earning titles, animal shelters continue to house dogs that were relinquished because they are too energetic, too smart, or too busy for most pet homes. Many of these dogs are great agility prospects. This month, meet Casey. By Lisa Barrett
